CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Conc̄ning p̄contract̄ and degrees of Consanguinite.

Usurped Power of the See of Rome heretofore exercised;

WHERAS heretofore the usurped power of the Bishop of Rome hathe alwayes entangled and troubled the mere jurisdiction and legal power of this Realme of England, and also unquietid muche the subjectis of the same by his usurped power in them, as by making that unlaufull whiche by Goddis wourde is laufull bothe in mariages and other thinges as heraftre shall appere at more length; and till nowe of late in our Souveraine Lordes tyme, whiche is otherwise by larning tawght than his predecessours in tymes past of longe tyme have ben, hath so contynued the same, wherof yet some sparkis be lefte whiche heraftre might kindle a greater fyer and so remayning his power not to seme utterly extincte, Therefore it is thought mooste convenient to the Kinges Highnes his Lordis sp̄uall and temporall with the Comons of his Realme assembled in this present plament that twoo thinges specially for this tyme be with diligence provided for, whereby many inconveniences hath ensued and many moo els mought ensue and followe: as where heretofore divers and many psonnes after longe contynuaunces togither in matrimonye, without any allegation of either of the pties or anny other at their mariage whie the same matrimony should not be good juste and laufull, and after the same matrimony solemnised and consūmate by carnall knowlege, and also some tyme fruite of children ensued of the same mariage, have nevertheless by an unjuste lawe of the Bishop of Rome, whiche is that uppon pretence of a former contracte made and not consūmate by carnall copulation, for profe wherof twoo witnes by that lawe were onely required, ben divorsed and separate contrarie to Goddis lawe, and so the true matrimony bothe solemnised in the face of the Church and consūmate with bodily knowlege and confirmed also with the fruite of children had betwene them clerely frustrate and dissolved: Further also by reason of other prohibitions than Goddis lawe admitteth, for their lucre by that Courte invented, the dispensation wherof they alwaies reservid to them selfis, as in kynnerede or affinitie betwene cousyn germaynes and so to fourth and fourth degree carnall knowlege of anny of the same kynne or affinitie bifore in suche outwarde degrees which elys were laufull and be not prohibited by Goddis lawe, and all bicause they wolde gett monney by it and kepe a reputation to their usurped jurisdiction; whereby not onely muche discorde betwene laufull maried psonnes hath contrarie to Goddis ordenance arrisen, muche debate and sute at the lawe with the wrongefull vexation and greate damage of the innocent partie hath ben procured, and many juste mariages brought in doubte and daunger of undoyng and also many tymes undoone and laufull heires disherited, Wherof there had never els but for his vayne glorious usurpation ben moved any suche question, syns fredōme in them was geven us by Goddis lawe which ought to be most sure & certein, But that notwithstanding mariages have been brought into suche an uncertainty thereby that no mariage coulde be so surely knytt and bounden but it shulde lye in either of the parties power and arbitre, casting away the feare of God, by meanes and compasses to prove a precontracte a kynnerede an alliance or a carnall knowlege to defeate the same, and so undre the pretense of thise allegations afore rehersid to lyve all the daies of their lyves in detestable adultery to thutter destruction of their owne soules and the provocations of the terrible wrath of God uppon the places where suche abominations were suffred and used: Be it therefore enacted by the King our Souveraine Lorde the Lordes sp̄uall and temporall and the Cōmons in this p̄sent plament assembled and by auctoritie of the same, that from the firste day of the monneth of July next [ensueyng[1]] in the yere of our Lorde God a thousande fyve hundred and forty, all and ev̄y suche mariages, as within this churche of England shalbe contracted betwene lauful psonnes, as by this acte wee declare all psonnes to be laufull that be not prohibited by Goddis lawe to mary, suche mariages being contracte and solemnised in the face of the churche and consūmate with bodily knowledge or frute of childerne or childe being had therin betwene the parties so maried, shalbe by auctoritie of this present plament aforesaid demed judged and taken to be lauful good juste and indissoluble, notwithstanding any precontracte or precontractis of matrimony, not consūmate with bodily knowlege, whiche either of the psonnes so married or both shalhave made with anny other psonne or psonnes, bifore the tyme of contracting that mariage which is solemnised and consūmate or wherof suche frute is ensued or maye ensue as afore; and notwithstanding any dispensation prescription lawe or other thinge graunted or confirmed by acte or otherwise: And that no reservation or prohibition, Goddis lawe except, shall trouble or impeche anny mariage without the Leviticall degrees; And that no pson of what estate degree or condition soever he or she be shall aftre the ([2]) first day of the [said[3]] monneth of July aforesaid be admitted in any of the sp̄uall Courtis within this the Kinges realme or anyhis Graces other landis and dominions to any proces plea or allegation contrarie to this foresaid acte.

CHAPTER XXV. (1)

AN ACTE concerning the Graunt of one entire Subsidie and two whole Fifteenes and Tenths granted by the Temporaltie.

WE the Kings Majesties most humble faithfull and obedient Subjects the Lords spirituall and temporall and the Commons in this present Parliament assembled, prudently calling to our remembrance, how long wee have enjoyed the speciall grace and blessing of God, before all other nations of the world, having continued and prospered now these many yeeres under so godly and vertuous a Prince, whose most excellent vertue and wisedome, besides other his innumerable benefits conferred to this Realme, have conserved us in tranquilitie and peace, even from the beginning of his reigne, untill now of late that his Highnesse hath beene compelled for God his friends and his owne causes to moove warre in one place and to defend in another against the ancient enemies of this Realme, as well the Frenchmen as the Scots; and also considering the infinite costes and charges which his Highnesse hath necessarily sustained both by Sea and by Land, for the suretie comfort and safegard of us his natural and faithfull subjects against the maine force & violence of our said enemies, who against all honour and faith have attempted to make divers and sundry invasions spoiles burnings and depopulations in this his Majesties Realme of England and other his Highnesse Dominions; the force and malice whereof notwithstanding, wee the people of this his Realme have for the most part of us so lived under his Majesties sure protection, and do yet so live out of all feare and danger as if there were no warre at all, even as the small fishes of the Sea in the most tempestuous and stormie weather doe lie quietly under the rocke or banke side, and are not mooved with the sourges of the water, nor stirred out of their quiet place, howsoever the winde bloweth; we cannot for our most bounden dueties but knowledge and confesse our selves to have and injoy under his Highnesse, and by his most gracious and godly regiment, all that ever wee have in this world, rendring unto his Majestie next God our most humble and immortall thankes with our most humble sute and lowly prayer on our knees that it may please the same to persever in studying and caring for us, who being left to ourselves are not able to continue one day in such sort as his Highnes hath preserved us almost these fortie yeeres; And albeit we have nothing worthie wherewithall to recompence any part of his Majesties infinite goodnesse, sundrie wayes heretofore declared towards us, yet to shew ourselves mindfull of our most bounden dueties towards his Majestie our most gracious and dread Soveraigne Lord, and likewise in consideration of his Majesties more than fatherly affection towards us his Graces poore subjects, hath not hitherto for the suretie and defence of us our wives and children either spared to imploy his most royall persone, or to consume his owne treasure and possessions, we have consulted together and determined, for a remembrance and declaration of our good willes and thankefull minds againe towards his Majestie, to beseech his Majestie most humbly to accept and graciously to receive at our hands the simple token or gift which we doe herewith present to his Majestie in writing freely with one assent granting the same, most humbly beseeching his Majestie to accept the same, as a poore token of our true and faithfull hearts towards him, as it pleased the great King Alexander to receive thankefully a cuppe of water of a poore man by the high way side: And that this our graunt heerein may bee ratified and confirmed by his Majesties royall assent, so to bee enacted and aucthorised by vertue of this present Parliament, as in such cases heretofore hath beene accustomed: And forasmuch as our habilitie doeth want, wee will pray daily to Almightie God to supply towards his Majestie for us, remayning during our lives his true faithfull and obedient subjects, ever ready with body and goods to serve the same from time to time, according to our most bounden duties: Wherefore Wee the sayde Lords and Commons doe by our mutuall assents and agreements, with one whole voyce and heartie good will, by the authoritie of this present Parliament, give and graunt to the Kings Highnesse, towards his foresaid great costes and inestimable charges, two whole Fifteenes and Tenths, to bee had payed taken and levied of the moveable goods cattals and other things usuall to such Fifteenes and Tenths to bee contributorie and chargeable within the Shires Cities Boroughes Townes and other places of this his Realme, in manner and forme afore time used;
